Summary and Comment

¶11. (SBU) President Heinz Fischer swore in the new Austrian Cabinet on January 11. The Social Democrats (SPO) and People's Party (OVP) each 7 ministers and three state secretaries, reflecting the closeness of the October 2006 election results (SPO with 35.3% and OVP with 34.3%). On the SPO side, Chancellor Alfred Gusenbauer's team includes several long-time confidants and advisors, including Women's Minister Doris Bures, Transportation and Infrastructure Minister Werner Faymann, Justice Minister Maria Berger, Defense Minister Norbert Darabos, Transportation and Infrastructure Ministry State Secretary Christa Kranzl, and Finance Ministry State Secretary Christoph Matznetter. Gusenbauer insisted on a 50% quota for women, and he also had to ensure sufficient representation of SPO-controlled states. The SPO list includes experienced politicians, such as Faymann and Berger, but also colorful newcomers, such as Education and Art Minister Claudia Schmied and Social Affairs Minister Erwin Buchinger. Schmied is well connected in Austrian cultural circles, but she will have to prove herself in the difficult and complex education agendas. Darabos, who, as a young man, opted to perform alternative service, rather than to serve in the military, may face some resistance from military experts in the MoD.

¶12. (SBU) The OVP team represents continuity. Foreign Minister Ursula Plassnik, Economics Minister Martin Bartenstein, and Agriculture and Environment Minister Josef Proell retained the positions they held in the outgoing OVP-led government. Interior Minister Guenther Platter moves over from the defense portfolio. The former OVP Parliamentary Caucus Leader, Wilhelm Molterer, is the new Vice-Chancellor and Finance Minister. Proell, whom many commentators tout as a future OVP Chancellor candidate, has taken on the key task of "coalition coordination" with the SPO. Science Minister Johannes Hahn and Health Minister Andrea Kdolsky are newcomers. Hahn, previously head of the Vienna State OVP, will most likely work to broaden the OVP's appeal to urban, liberal voters.
End Summary and Comment.

¶13. (U) Following are biographies of Chancellor Gusenbauer, Vice-Chancellor and Finance Minister Molterer, and the Ministers and State Secretaries in the new government.

Chancellor Alfred Gusenbauer (SPO) - NEW

¶14. (SBU) During the campaign, Gusenbauer admitted that he has aspired to be Chancellor since he was a schoolboy. In 2000, after the resignation of Victor Klima, Gusenbauer became SPO Party Chairman for what many thought would be an interim period. Gusenbauer simultaneously assumed the post of Social Democratic floor leader in Parliament. Following the surprising SPO victory in the October 2006 elections, Gusenbauer pursued his goal of forming a government with utmost perseverance. He methodically overcame OVP reluctance to be his junior partner, making extensive concessions to the OVP to obtain their consensus to a coalition pact.

¶ 15. (SBU) Gusenbauer was born on February 8, 1960 in the Lower Austrian city of St Poelten. He comes from a blue-collar background. He holds a Doctorate in Political Science from the University of Vienna. Gusenbauer has been active in the social democratic movement since his teenage years. He led the youth wing of Austria's Social Democrats for six years (1984-1990) and was a Vice President of the Socialist International in the 1980s. Gusenbauer served in the Upper House of Parliament from 1991-1993, before moving over to the more powerful Lower House. Gusenbauer has been a member of Austria's parliamentary delegation to the Council of Europe since 1991.

¶ 16. (SBU) Gusenbauer is well known for his expertise in international affairs, especially from his years in the field of development assistance. Gusenbauer has acquired a solid working knowledge of macroeconomics and industrial relations, which he gained in part as a senior research fellow in the Economic Policy Department of the Chamber of Labor (1990-1999). He also served as the SPO's finance spokesman in 1999.

¶ 17. (SBU) Gusenbauer is part of the "Tuscany Faction" in the SPO, which also includes influential Vienna Mayor Michael Haeupl. He speaks fluent English and Spanish, as well as some French, and he is a wine connoisseur. His common-law spouse, Eva Steiner, is an interpreter. The couple has a daughter.

Vice-Chancellor/Finance Minister Wilhelm Molterer (OVP)

¶ 18. (SBU) Wilhelm Molterer has primarily operated behind the scenes, closely working with former Chancellor Wolfgang Schuessel to coordinate the OVP's parliamentary work and to pave the way toward implementation of the Schuessel government's projects. Molterer now moves into the limelight, assuming not only the positions of Vice-Chancellor and Finance Minister, but also that of acting OVP Party Chairman. At the April OVP party convention, delegates will most likely confirm him as Party Chairman. However, many commentators point to Agriculture Minister Josef Proell as the OVP's most likely chancellor candidate for the 2010 elections.

¶ 19. (SBU) Molterer was born May 14, 1955 in Steyr, Upper Austria. Molterer attended the Johannes Kepler University in Linz from 1974 to 1980, graduating with a Master's Degree in Social Economics. While at the university he served as president of the student union. Molterer worked as an assistant in the Agricultural Policy Department at the University of Linz from late 1979 until February ¶ 1981.

¶ 10. (SBU) Beginning March 1981, Molterer was head of the Economic Policy Division of the Austrian Farmers' Federation until the end of ¶ 1984. Beginning in January 1985, Molterer worked in the provincial government of Upper Austria and simultaneously as a municipal counselor in Sieming. In January 1987 Molterer became chief adviser to then-Agriculture Minister Josef Riegler. Molterer held the agricultural market organization portfolio, as well as trade and trade promotion. In April 1989 he became Chief of Staff to the new Agriculture Minister, Franz Fischler.

¶ 11. (SBU) Molterer served as Secretary General of the VVP from December 1993 to November 1994. In November 1994, Molterer became Minister of Agriculture and Forestry. He relinquished this post in 2003, when he assumed the position of OVP Parliamentary Floor Leader. Molterer is well liked among his colleagues and comes across as a thoughtful, considerate politician. He is married and has two sons.

Foreign Minister Ursula Plassnik (OVP)

¶12. (SBU) Ursula Plassnik's career has been closely linked with OVP Parliamentary Leader and former Chancellor Wolfgang Schuessel. She became his Chief of Staff in 1997, when Schuessel was Foreign Minister and Vice Chancellor. Serving as Foreign Minister since 2004, Plassnik has gradually crafted a profile as a professional and expert politician. She was unarguably an asset for the OVP during the fall 2006 elections. Despite a reputation as somewhat aloof, Plassnik has established close relationships with many of her foreign colleagues.

¶13. (SBU) Plassnik was born on May 23, 1956 in Klagenfurt, Carinthia. She was a high school exchange student in Foxcroft, Virginia in 1971-1972. Plassnik holds a Doctorate in Law from the University of Vienna (1978), and earned a post-graduate diploma from the Collège d'Europe in Bruges, Belgium. After her studies, Plassnik initially worked as a research assistant at the University of Vienna's Institute for Roman Law and Ancient Legal History. She then was an intern at a Vienna court, and had an internship in the legal department of a Vienna bank.

¶14. (SBU) Plassnik joined the Austrian foreign service in February 1981. She initially served in the MFA's International Law Department and in the Directorates for Security Policy and the Commission for Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE). Postings abroad included Bern (1984-86), the CSCE Delegation to the Madrid Follow-up Meeting (1981-83), the Vienna Follow-up Meeting (1986-87), and to the Austrian Representation to the Council of Europe (1987-90).

¶15. (SBU) During sabbatical leave from 1990-1994, Plassnik worked at the Geneva-based European Free Trade Association (EFTA) Secretariat. In 1994, she studied at the St. Gallen Foundation for

SIPDIS
International Studies in Switzerland. Plassnik rejoined the MFA in November 1994, working first in the Directorate-General for Economic Policy and EU Coordination, later as head of the Directorate for the General Affairs Council and the European Council.

¶16. (SBU) Plassnik served as Wolfgang Schuessel's Chief of Staff from 1997-2003, a period when Schuessel transitioned from Vice Chancellor to Chancellor. She then became Austrian Ambassador to Switzerland (January to October 2004), but curtailed when Schuessel selected her to be Minister of Foreign Affairs. Plassnik is twice divorced.

Defense Minister Norbert Darabos (SPO) - NEW

¶17. (SBU) Darabos has acquired a reputation as an effective political operative within the SPO. He successfully organized SPO campaigns, including the 2000 Burgenland state election and President Heinz Fischer's successful 2004 run. Darabos was instrumental in helping Gusenbauer win the October 2006 elections despite a widely unfavorable political climate for the SPO and Gusenbauer. Following the election, most analysts pegged Darabos to become Interior Minister.

¶18. (SBU) Darabos, with an ethnic Croatian background, was born May 31, 1964 in the state of Burgenland. He comes from a blue-collar family, attended a Catholic high school in Eisenstadt, and earned a Master's Degree in History and Political Science from the University of Vienna.

¶19. (SBU) Darabos' political career began as head of the Burgenland chapter of the SPO think tank "Renner Institute" in 1987. From 1991 to 1997 Darabos worked as office manager and press spokesman for the governor of Burgenland, and then as party manager of the Burgenland SPO. From 2000 to 2003 Darabos was SPO party whip in the state parliament of Burgenland. In 2003, Gusenbauer appointed Darabos national SPO Party Manager. Since June 2004, Darabos has been a member of the federal parliament. In the 1990s Darabos represented the SPO on the Viewers' Council of the ORF National Broadcasting Agency. He was also a representative of the Croatian minority in the National Minorities Advisory Council.

¶20. (SBU) Darabos is the first Austrian defense minister who chose to satisfy his compulsory service requirement through alternative community service in lieu of military service. His hobbies are table tennis and soccer. He is president of a local soccer club. Darabos is married and has two teen-age children. His family still lives in his hometown of Kroatisch-Minihof, Burgenland.

In 1986, Platter's political career began as a municipal councilor in his hometown of Zams, where he later served as mayor (1989-2000). In 1994, Platter became an OVP parliamentarian. In this function, he was a member of the Committees on both Internal and Defense Affairs, and also the National Defense Council.

¶22. (SBU) In 2000, Platter became the Deputy Party Chairman of Tyrolean OVP. He served as a minister in the state government of Tyrol responsible for sports, culture, schools, employees' interests, and immigration issues. Since 2001, he has also been Chairman of the Tyrolean Employees' Association. In February 2003, Platter joined the second Schuessel cabinet as Minister of Defense. Commentators have speculated that Platter is the heir-apparent to the Tyrolean Governor Herwig Van Staa. Platter and his wife have two sons, aged 16 and 20.

Minister of Economy and Labor Martin Bartenstein (OVP)

¶23. (SBU) Martin Bartenstein has held ministerial positions since 1996 when he became Environment Minister. He became Minister of Economy and Labor in 2000. Bartenstein was born on June 3, 1953, in Graz, Styria. He holds a Doctorate in Chemistry from the University of Graz.

¶24. (SBU) In 1978, Bartenstein joined his family's pharmaceutical company (Lannacher Heilmittel GmbH) and served as General Manager from 1980 until 1995. Bartenstein has also worked in the executive offices of Genericon Pharma GesmbH and Parmavit AG, Budapest. Bartenstein's political career began in 1991, when he became an OVP parliamentarian. From 1994 to 1995, he served as Under Secretary in the Ministry of Public Economy and Transportation, and then subsequently as Minister of the Environment and Public Economy (1995 - 1996). Parliament (MEP) since 1996, she served on the Justice Affairs Committee, and, most recently, as justice spokeswoman for the European Social Democrats. Berger's academic career includes positions as Assistant Professor at Innsbruck University, and Vice-President of the Lower Austrian Danube University. In her initial statements as Justice Minister, Berger stressed the need to take further measures to combat human trafficking, both at the European and the domestic level, and for more international cooperation to fight "crime tourism."

Minister for Transportation and Infrastructure Werner Faymann (SPO)
- NEW

¶26. (SBU) Werner Faymann, previously the Vienna City Councilor for Housing Construction, was born on May 24, 1960. He was, together with Gusenbauer, active in the SPO youth organization "Socialist Youth" in the 1980s. He then shifted to Vienna city politics, and became a City Councilor in 1994. Faymann has cultivated excellent contacts with the media. He is married and has two children.

Minister for Agriculture and Environment Josef Proell (OVP)

¶27. (SBU) Many observers consider Josef Proell, the nephew of influential Lower Austrian Governor Erwin Proell, as the most obvious long term successor to Schuessel OVP leader. Apart from his ministerial position, Proell has also taken on the task of "coalition coordinator" for the OVP vis-`-vis the SPO.

¶28. (SBU) Proell was born on September 14, 1968 in the Lower Austrian city of Stockerau. Proell studied agricultural economics at the University of Natural Resources and Applied Life Sciences in Vienna from 1987-1993. Minister for Social Security, Generations and Consumer Protection
Erwin Buchinger (SPO) - NEW

¶32. (SBU) Political analysts had consistently considered Erwin

Buchinger, formerly Salzburg State Councilor for Social Affairs, as the top SPO candidate for an economic or social affairs ministerial portfolio. He is close to Salzburg Governor Gabi Burgstaller. He served as a social affairs and labor expert to Burgstaller during her successful 2004 campaign, acquiring the nickname "Mr. Labor."

VIENNA 00000147 005 OF 006
